BALTIMORE, Jan. 38.-Washington special to the Sun: "Of the various documents transmitted by the president to congress explaining the course of the department of state in the Samoan complication, the letter of Prince Bismarck to Baron Von Ledwitz, of the German legation of Washington in November, 1887, and the reply of ton in January, 1888, are perhaps the most interesting as presenting in a clear and interesting way the respective claims of Germany and the United States. Prince Bismarck in his letter refers to the complaints

The American consul, Canisius, has been pointed to us as the author of two letters which Malletoa addressed the emperor in 1885, containing complaints with regard to the imperial representatives in Apia, and an insulting critique of German measures. The next American consul, Greenbaum, made opposition to Germany in everything, encouraging Malletoa at the same time in his provoking attitude toward Germany. His arbitrary announcement of an Amerihis provoking attitude toward Germany. His arbitrary announcement of an American protectorate in May, 1885, was disavowed by his government. The encroachments of the present representative of the United States in Apia have, as you know, repeatedly given occasion to me to complain of his conduct. In view of the friendly relations which have continued for more than a century between Germany and the United States, it is remarkable that on that remote realm of islands, where neither America or Germany has any political in-United States, it is remarkable that on that remote realm of islands, where neither America or Germany has any political interests to defend, we are exposed to the continued ill-will of a series of American representatives. There are no local commercial rivairies which could explain such a fact. The American element has not aspired to considerable commercial success on the Samoan Islands. The value of imports in Apia in 1885 which went through the hands of American merchants amounted to $92,000; German imports to $2,920,000. In exports Germany had $280,000 and the Americans $31,000. German firms had established outside of Apia and on other islands of the group fifty commercial and trading stations; the American firms had not one. German firms owned in 1885 twenty-one ships for trade in the South Sea; American firms had two tone. German firms had trading stations in the American plantations do not exist, and only about 100 acres of property owned by Americans are cultivated. The houses and property owned by German subjects represented a value of $175,000; Americans, $32,000. Germany had never made uses of this mercautile preponderance to secure commercial privileges, as the United States recently did in Hawali, by the ratification of a renewed reciprocity treaty. We

States recently did in Hawaii, by the ratification of a renewed reciprocity treaty. We always maintained the principles of the policy of the rights of nations in Samoa, and never aspired to political advantages. Moreover, we have repeatedly given assurances that it is not our intention to change anything with regard to the relations of the treaty powers to Samoa. I fail, therefore, to find in the facts themselves any reason that could explain the continual ill-will shown toward us in Samoa by American representatives and should be thankful to Bayard if he would lend me his assistance in the investigation of this strange fact. Should the supposition be right that those difficulties have their origin in the personal disposition of representatives and not in their instructions, I am convinced the American government will cause the mecessary redress to take place.

"It cannot be conceived that consular officers who do not respect the limits of their tasks, and who cause by their conduct international ill feeling between countries entertaining friendly relations toward each other, act in the interest of their government, with which Germany, since the foundation of the American union, has been connected by traditional friendship."

In a dispatch to Minister Pendleton Secretary Bayard insisted the contentions and troubles in Samoa were due to the acts of American consuls and presented counter charges against Germany's representatives. He reviewed the various diplomatic negotiations and said: 'This government had manifested a desire to avoid all possibilities of difference with other treaty powers in Samoa. Had the government of the United States entertained any designs of territorial aggrandizement or political control in Samoa, they could have been accomplished, with much satisfaction to the natives, long prior to the date of either the German or British treaty. But another and widely different policy has guided our action in respect to the native communities in the Southern Pacific and the secretary thinks it is not administered. To the United States the object first in importance has seemed to be the preservation of native independence, and so regarding matters, this government, while not questioning Germany's assurances of the absence of any intention on her part to annex or establish a protectorate over the islands, has been compelled to dissent from a proposition which seems to subordinate other considerations to the strengthening of German commercial and landed interests in the Islands, and correspondingly diminish, if not entirely destroy, the probability of a Samoan government and the neutralization of the group, at least in respect to the powers now concerned.

St. Paul special: Military circles in the department of Dakota were agitated to day when the president's formal acceptance of the resignation of First Lieutenant George W. Webb, of the Twenty-fifth in fantry, stationed at Fort Custer, Mont., was received at headquarters. It was Secretary Bayard through Minister Pendle- | known for sometime that Lieut. Webb was at loggerheads with Col. Dudley, of the First cavalry, commandant at Fort Custer, but neither Col. Dudley nor the officials at many and the United States. Prince Bismarck in his letter refers to the complaints before made of the anti-German attitude observed by American Consul-General Sewall during Germany's action against Malietoa. Bismarck added Germany had had a similar experience with the predecessor of Sewall, on all occasions whenever that government endeavored, in view of the unsettled state of affairs in Samoa, to obtain better guarantees for the protection of German subjects and their commercial interest. 'The report of our representatives in Apia for the past seven years,' says he, 'repeatedly contains the complaint that their American colleagues showed a tendency to interfere with our relations to the Samoan government and insulation of the German ship hone, on the requisition of the demander of the German ship hone, on the requisition of the demander of the German ship hone, on the requisition of the German ship hone, on the requisition of the demander of the German ship hone, on the requisition of the German ship hone, on the requisition of the demander of the German ship hone, on the requisition of the development of positive proof of washing the development of countries of the development of countries of the development of satisfacts of the development of satisfacts of the development of department headquarters, who were cognizant of the facts in the case, would give
